In the clinic we are often forced to treat symptoms instead of the underlying pathology. This holds true for as different diseases as irritable bowel syndrome and spasms in the esophagus. This year SAGIM has gathered a group of experts to guide us through current and new treatments for symptoms caused by neurogastroenterology and motility disorders. The years scientific meeting will have the following agenda:

- Lectures held by international experts on symptom based treatment using old and new drugs and non-pharmacological interventions
- Presentation of cases from the clinic with votes on specific questions stimulating discussions
- Sessions on new knowledge in GI imaging, microbiota and motility testing

Through case discussions every participant is encourage to contribute with their own experience.

The target groups are:

- Young doctors in gastroenterology and surgery
- Specialists in gastroenterology and surgery
- Nurses and others with an interest in motility disorders

The meeting is held on Tivoli Congress Center in central Copenhagen
